

André Nadon

André Nadon joined the Laval Police Service in 1964, and four years later started his police association involvement. In 1976, he was elected as president of the Quebec Federation of Police, a position he would hold for the next ten years. 1976 also marked the beginning of André's remarkable run of twenty-three years as the Canadian Police Association Quebec Vice-President. Fluently bilingual, André worked tirelessly over the span of his association career to enhance communications and understanding within the CPA's diverse and widespread membership.

During his police association career, André Nadon was a fierce negotiator who combined keen insight with determination and tenacity to advance the cause of his members at the local, provincial and national levels..
